FAREWELL.

Farewell! Oh is there aught on earth
So mournful as that word,
When amid scenes of light, and mirth,
And music, it is heard?
Whispered by one we love too well,
And may meet for years,
When smiles upon the lip just dwelt,
While the heart is full of tears.

Farewell, farewell! ah, breath it not
Within the banquet hall,
But in some quiet, lonely spot,
Where the spirit may no thrall.
Where every feeling of the soul
On love's light wing springs free,
And the heart may weep without control,
There let our parting be.

As music of the restless deep,
Within some calm, the echoes never sleep,
The rock such sighing wave;
In memory's enchanted cell,
Shall linger every tone,
Each whispered word of thy farewell,
Be cherished, there alone!

And from the cavern's sparkling well
Bright drops forever spring,
That mingle in their ceaseless fall,
And into crystal clung;
Thus, word, and look, and smile of thine,
Have fallen on my heart,
And thy spirit breathing into mine
Is itself a part.

Then linger not, where all is gay,
To whisper thy farewell,
Where other eyes in coldness may
Upon our sorrow dwell,
Mid light, and mirth, and beauty's bloom
A parting such as ours
Were mournful as a ruined tomb,
Surrounded all by flowers.

WARM HEARTS HAD KATE AND I.

BY AUSTIN T. CARLE.

The autumn winds were damp and cold,
And dark the clouds that swept along,
As from the fields the grains of gold.

We gathered with the huter's song,
Our hardy forms strong, thirly clad,
Searce felt the wind that swept esby;
For a child, and I a lad—

Warm hearts had we, my Kate and I.

The relin hungry to us came,
And, fast, feasting, listend to our song.

Then hung his head in very shame—
Less joyous notes to him belong;

He needled we, though thirly clad,
Of autumn winds that swept us by;

Ah! she a child, and I a lad—

Warm hearts had we, my Kate and I.

From the Louisville Journal.

WHERE IS HE?

And still flourish he, a pale green tree,
When haughty years are gone."

How great and great and glorious old Hal, friend P. T. He has been more freshly called to my mind-to-day, though an evergreen in every Whig heart, by a plaster medallion of him sent me by T. Jones, the promising sculptor of the West, now in New York. In a group of gentlemen admiring its similitude, Loco present but was not of Clay? I send you the except, believing it will be welcome in your journal, however weak a vindication it may be, and though published in a somewhat similar shape some years ago in the Detroit Advertiser under my initials:

Where is he? Ask the mighty host!
Of freemen in our native land!
A million voices will respond,
While each one proudly clasps his hand
To his warm heart, and with a tear
For him they honor, answer—here!

Where is he? In the frozen North,
In the vast empire of the West,
In the sweet lowlands of the South,
That rallying name is known and blest!

On land, a watchword for the free—
The sailor sheets it on the sea!

Where is he? Far beyond the reach
Of his fierce, unfeeling foes—
In vain does malice strive to crush
Colossal genius with its blows—

The arrows winged with envious aim
Break on the bright shield of his fame!

Where is he? When the world would be great,
The party pugnac of to-day,
Are all forgot, mankind will weep—

Around the world the grand of Clay!
Where then will be their name who dare
Desame him? Echo answers—where?

THE TRIBUNE.

CONDENSED HISTORY OF STEAM.—About 280 B. C. Hero, of Alexandria, formed a toy which exhibited some of the powers of steam and was moved by its power.

A. D. 540, Anthemius, an architect, arranged several cauldrons of water, each covered with the wide bottom of a leather tube, which rose to a narrow top with pipes extending to the rafters of the adjoining building. A fire was kindled beneath the cauldrons, and the house was shaken by the force of steam ascending the tubes. This is the first notice of the power of steam recorded.

In 1543, June 17, Blasco DeGaroy tried a steamboat of 200 tons with success at Barcelona, Spain. It consisted of a cauldron of boiling water and a movable wheel on each side of the ship. It was laid aside as impracticable. A present how it was made to Caroy.

In 1690 the first railroad was constructed at Newcastle on Tyne.

The first idea of a steam engine in England was in the Marquis of Worcester's "History of Invention," A. D. 1663.

In 1710 Newcomen made the first steam engine in England.

In 1718 patents were granted to Savery for the first application of the steam engine.

In 1763 James Watt made the first perfect steam Engine in England.

In 1765 Jonathan Hall first set forth the idea of steam navigation.

In 1778 Thomas Paine first proposed the application in America.

In 1781 Marquis Jouffray constructed a steamboat on the Seine.

In 1785 two Americans published a work on it.

In 1795 William Symington made a voyage in one on the Forth and Clyde Canal.

In 1802 this experiment was repeated.

In 1802 Ramsey propelled a boat by steam at New York.

In 1797 John Finch, of Connecticut, navigated a boat by a steam engine on the Delaware.

In 1798 Robert Fulton first began to apply his invention to steam.

In 1799 Oliver Evans, a native of Philadelphia, constructed a locomotive steam engine to travel on a Turnpike road.

The first steam vessel that ever crossed the Atlantic was the Savannah, in the month of June, 1810, from Charleston to Liverpool.—Fruit's Merchant's Magazine.

R. C. Ayer's Farina, F.R.S. is incomparably wholesome and nutritious, consisting as a food for the healthy, but especially adapted to the dietary requisites in every well provided family. It is delicate and important uses as a diet for invalids and sick, as well as for the sustenance of growing children and infants, particularly for the latter at the critical period of weaning, have also secured a character in the sick room and nursery, equal to its reputation as a food for the robust and hearty.

Indeed, no other substance is so well calculated to establish during infancy the formation of a strong and well developed physical organization.

Chemical analysis, from the most distinguished authorities in New York and elsewhere, prove it to contain those elemental properties necessary to the promotion of muscle and bone in the system, as are satisfying other demands of the mysterious principle of life.
